

NJTRAx Digital Learning Survey

The East Rutherford School District is using the NJTRAx Digital Learning tool to assess readiness and implementation. Sponsored by the New Jersey Department of Education, this Digital Learning Readiness Assessment is a school version of the District Readiness Assessment used at the White House Future Ready Summits. Grounded in a key set of indicators for effective implementation of digital learning, six surveys will be used to collect data from six different stakeholder groups. Those six include: students (5th-8th), parents/guardians, teachers, school administrators, information technology coordinators, and educational technology coordinators. Once the data are collected, a customized report for the school will be generated with its readiness ratings for digital learning and comparisons of perspectives across the survey respondent groups.
